An elevated community event featuring particularly-curated artist vendors.

Dear Reader:

Punxsutawney Phil, arguably the world's most famous rodent, may not have the best record for accuracy. This year, however, it looks like that furry little fellow was right on the money. You may recall Phil did not see his shadow, predicting an early spring. The purple spring beauties and yellow daffodils popping up around Norton Commons are happy confirmations of his prediction. Mother Nature may well still throw us a curve ball or two – this is Kentucky after all – but we're enjoying the sunshine and prepping for all things spring (and beyond)!

This year, we have an exceptionally wonderful calendar of community events for residents and visitors alike. Tried-and-true favorites like Art Festival, Music by the Water, Farmers Market, Fall Festival, and many more return, and newer events like Cars in the Commons and Food Truck Fridays continue to build momentum. With over 27 live music dates in the neighborhood this year, if music is your thing, we've got you covered. Check out the events calendar included in this edition and save that page for your social planning.

The onset of spring also means that patio season is almost underway at our award-winning restaurants and bars. We now have twenty (yes, twenty!) food and beverage establishments within the community, and you won't find a more charming array of patios anywhere else in the city. Our boutiques are ready for the season change, too, with bright spring dresses, accessories, and Derby-event hats. We've added several new service providers over the winter as well, and we hope you'll check them out when you're in need of high-quality medical or other professional services.

In short, Norton Commons has just about everything a person could want for highly-convenient, elevated living.

Speaking of living here, we opened a new section of the Hamlet in Oldham County this winter and over half of those lots are already under contract. With a little more elbow room in those lots, some folks find our Hamlet section is the best of both worlds – the convenience of Norton Commons living and a bit more space to call their own. We also have great variety in Jefferson County, with both smaller and larger lots available, as well as some well-planned townhomes currently for sale. So whether you want a yard or have little interest in exterior maintenance of any kind, we have something for you. Variety in product and lot sizes is one of the most unique things about Norton Commons. Here, folks can truly customize their home to their lifestyle. It's a neighborhood unlike any other.

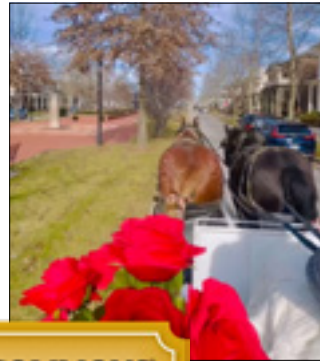

If you haven't visited Norton Commons in a while, now is the perfect time to come by and see what we've been up to all winter. In the North Village especially, we think you'll be amazed at the progress. Stop and stay a while – enjoy a meal or a cocktail, or a night out at one of our events. You won't have to search long to see why neighbors love the easy convenience of our neighborhood. We'd love you to be a part of it all, too.

Hope to see you around the neighborhood!
